Michael Grubb is a leading international researcher on the economic dimensions of and policy responses to climate change and energy policy issues including renewable energy sources. He has been a lead author for several reports of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) addressing the economic, technological and social aspects of limiting greenhouse gas emissions and has advised a number of governments, companies and international studies on climate change policy. He is editor-in-chief of the journal Climate Policy and is on the editorial board of Energy Policy.

Mr. Grubb was formerly Head of the Energy and Environmental Programme at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, before becoming Professor of Climate Change and Energy Policy at Imperial College. He remains a Visiting Professor at Imperial College, and is also a Senior Research Associate at the Faculty of Economics in Cambridge University. He gained his PhD in energy systems analysis from Cambridge.
